Wake Forest University School of Medicine has an exciting summer program!

The Wake Forest Medical Scholars Summer Program is an educational program designed to recruit, educate, and prepare underrepresented minorities and disadvantaged high school students for careers in the health profession. The School of Medicine's Office of Student Inclusion & Diversity seeks to enroll 10 to 15 high school students to participate in a summer experience, which includes a tour of our Wake Forest School of Medicine building, career exploration, clinical simulations, and exposure to state-of-the-art health technology equipment.

At the end of the program, students will present about their experience.
